In response to a growing need for skilled trades, Ford Motor Company and the Bing Group commissioned JM Olson Corporation to provide construction services for a new 40,000 sf training center in Detroit's Empowerment Zone. The new Center, offers eight-week courses in metal stamping, injection molding, robotic welding and light assembly. The facility includes classrooms, shop areas and a cafeteria.

"The skilled trades are the backbone of Michigan's economy, and if we don't invest in the work force of today, we won't be competitive tomorrow."
